r/magusofthelibrary · Posted by u/altathing Hamma 1 year ago 29

The History of the Atlatonan Continent Part 1 [Source: @izumimitsu1102 (Author's twitter)]

Discussion

Text is MTL from DeepL with minor edits for clarity. [Brackets refer to official TL romanization]

Also see my posts on the world and races of the series.

A long, long time ago There was still no continent, just a few islands. On these islands, dragons called Serrano [Syrannah] thrived.

On one of the islands, in the forest, there was a small animal In the forest of one of those islands, there was a small animal that was later called Lobino. These children are the ancestors of man.

The Syrannah way of life, which had lasted for tens of thousands of years, came to an end one day in a war between the Syrannah. The magic unleashed by the two armies is so powerful that it destroys Syrannah civilization and turns the entire planet into an ice age.

During the Ice Age that followed the Syrannah War, many races died out. While many races were dying off, a race emerged that used fire to keep warm. This is the Lobino of a certain island and a certain forest. The Lobino of the forest on one of the islands have been transformed into a dwarf-like form.

During the Ice Age, the islands in the sea area were partially connected to the land due to the lowering of the water level and the freezing of the sea surface. Some of them became land-locked. The fire-using Lobino and his friends left the islands at this time, thinking that there might be a better place to keep warm. They left the island at this time. The fire-using Lobinos thought that there was a better place to keep warm and left the island at this time. After this trip, they distributed to various islands.

Lobino and his friends have finally left the forest of their home. With the end of the ice age, the ice bridge disappeared and the islands returned to their original state. And Lobino's clan, scattered across the islands at this time It will be a long time before they meet again in a slightly different form. Syrannah may or may not have taught him how to use fire...

After the Ice Age, the Syrannah people disappeared from the islands, and the Sea Dragons, giant marine creatures, flourished. [Thalassaurs] The Lobino, who were divided among the islands, learned how to use various tools and developed their civilization. However, even if they learned how to build a ship, they could not go out to sea and travel to other islands because of the Thalassaurs.

One day, when the era of the Thalassaurs had lasted for a long, long time... A natural disaster of unprecedented scale struck the planet. Volcanoes burned, the seabed rose, and the earth began to move in a huge scale.

Note: The Fossil of Ah Tabai, Equeko Ravine, and Ah Cancum Trailway are products of this merger.

When the tectonic movement ended... the islands in the sea area were combined and transformed into a single continent. This was the birthplace of the Atlatonan continent, where various peoples would weave their histories.

Lobino and his friends, who have now become "people," set out on a journey outside in a world where the sea has receded and the sea dragons have disappeared. There, they meet their former friends, who are similar to them, but of a different color and shape. They recognize each other as enemies, and this is where the era of ethnic strife and prosperity begins.

Note: Look at the Creyak profile in volume 5, mentions the Gralice

First came the age of brute force. At the forefront of the conflict were the Gariti [Gralice], the ancestors of the Creeks [Creyak], who overwhelmed the other races with their strength and unity, and established an era of power. Other peoples created small nations and civilizations, but they did not grow for fear of being spotted by the Gralice.

Note: This is the Disc of Nezahuapaleha.

While the Gralice continue to use their strength to steal land and crops from other tribes, an era of violence continues. Among the many peoples who were simply frightened, there was a tribe that secretly developed a technology to defeat the Gralice It was the power of knowledge to cooperate with nature to overcome violence. Paean of the Sea of Trees is a text from this period

One day, the Gralice attacked a town as usual, but were repelled by a strange power. It was "magic," the manipulation of mana in a formation to affect nature. The Gralice tried to attack the town with various tactics, and it gradually developed into a war. After several wars, the Gralice were defeated and the age of strength came to an end.

The next time was the Age of Wisdom. After the victory over the Gralice, the people of the town took on the name of Hopi [Haupi] and established the Haupi Kingdom. The Haupi Kingdom grew into a large city and made progress in various fields of study, leading to hundreds of years of peace.

The Haupi tribe, with a few talented sorcerers, protected their cities and built a peaceful country. In their time, the civilization of the continent was greatly advanced. One day, however, the sorcerers protecting the city are defeated by a foreign race from the north. They wore masks and used a new power that allowed them to unleash magic even without talent. The Disc of Nezahuapaleha is a text from this period

One day, the Haupi Kingdom, which had built an advanced civilization, was destroyed in a single night. The sorcerers of Haupi were defeated because of the power of the "Book of Magic" developed by the masked race of Kadoe, which allows non-magicians to perform magic. Many valuable books and cultures were lost, and the Dark Age of the Masked Empire began.

Note: Jain Sei Tehn's story is told in "Jain Sei Tehn: the First Great Magus" which was an off-hand book mention in the story (Volume 5, page 42). Pages 41-42 of Volume 5 seem to list books describing the story of the era, thus the library sorts by historiography to some extent I will explain further in my post about the books and texts of the world.

With the overwhelming power of magic, the Kingdom of Kadoe expanded its territory from the Haupi Kingdom and became the largest empire in the history of the continent. It was during this time that the second emperor of the empire, Jane Seay-Teng [Jain Sei Tehn], gave herself the title of "Grand Sorceress" [Great Magus]. It was at this time that the culture of the head of a tribe or organization calling himself or herself the Great Magus was born.

Also, during this time, the Jagwa, who were working for the Kadoe and plundering the land, attacked a Haida [Hydiah] village in the western part of the continent, where they mixed with the Hydiah and their descendants became the Hurons [Hyrons]. The Hydiah blood barely survived, but they lost their homeland and were bullied by the Hyron for the rest of their lives. The Trine is a text from this period.

Note: The Kadoe Faith is Ki, thus the Kadoe suppressed Manaccha

At this time, there was a commercial city on the western coast of the continent that belonged to the Empire. The inhabitants of the city, the Lakota [Rakta], began to secretly campaign for the overthrow of the Kadoe Empire due to the heavy taxes imposed by the Empire and the suppression of bishops by the Kadoe faithful.

Note: Kala could refer to the hero in Ka Larful, the first serialized novel

After careful preparations, the Rakta people finally launched a war of independence against the Empire. After a long battle, the Rakta hero Kala [No apparent official TL] defeated the Imperial general Alastor [No apparent official TL], and the Rakta cities gained their independence.

altathing OP · 1y ago
Hamma
People don't seem to be reading this post. This contains significant new lore straight from the author herself, including the sketches.
7 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

POTATO-AIM-V20 · 1y ago
Last sketch is the best sketch
5 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

TheCommunistLizard · 1y ago
Kafna
Thanks for translating this, some really important stuff here. Like how she pulls from real life historical events here and would love to learn more about the different empires from the past. Especially the Kadoe and Haupi and how their different rulers were like.
4 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

gr3nk · 1y ago
Kafna
Very interesting, thanks for this.
2 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

Geefkcs · 1y ago
Kafna
This is pretty cool, how did you find it? Was it on the authors Twitter?
1 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow

altathing OP · 1y ago
Hamma
Yes, the source is in the title, twitter is private but she does accept follow requests, but it seems she doesn't check often.
1 Reply Give Award Share Report Save Follow